BIOHAZARK GAME SET +CD Key!FREE!!Measurement of subendocardial myocardial blood flow and left ventricular function with myocardial contrast echocardiography in pigs. The feasibility of monitoring subendocardial myocardial blood flow and left ventricular function at rest and during stress was assessed in seven chronically instrumented 12-14-week-old (average 130 kg) domestic pigs. Using myocardial contrast echocardiography, which is based on ultrasound backscatter, studies were made with three consecutive power injections at 8, 12, and 16 microliters/kg during spontaneous breathing. The myocardial blood flow values were calculated as mean transit time corrected to tracer concentration and divided by myocardial volume. Left ventricular function was assessed during rest and stress (tertiary transmural stimulation) of the left ventricle, with and without dobutamine (5
